

Membership Overview

Building a network unlike ever seen before, Audubon Lifestyles and the International Sustainability Council (ISC) have partnered to create a unique membership opportunity.

ISC/Audubon Lifestyles Membership was created to help foster sustainability by working with, and providing educational resources to individuals, businesses, organizations, universities, government entities, municipalities, communities, neighborhoods, and virtually anyone seeking assistance in balancing the triple bottom line of people, profit, and planet. Our ability to reach our organization's mission and vision depends on your participation.

Incorporating sustainability into our day to day activities helps to guarantee a long life for businesses, communities, buildings, and society at large. It is difficult to find consistency among definitions of sustainability, but it is common sense that sustainability should incorporate a relationship between the natural environment, social causes, and corporate governance. In a company boardroom, this translates to the "triple bottom line". That means that businesses must make investment decisions that will benefit the environment and society, and still guarantee profitability.

Please join with us today and make a positive contribution toward being socially, environmentally and economically responsible where you live, work and recreate.
